+ DETAILS

Date: Friday, January 25, 2008

Time: 8:00 AM – 5:30 PM

Location: San Diego Natural History Museum
Balboa Park, 1788 El Prado, San Diego, CA

Summit Objective

An improvement in the successful understanding and implementation of structures and sites that are fire resistant, resilient, and appropriate.

Summary

This Summit is about planning, design, construction, operation & maintenance in the context of sustainable development within the built environment and is NOT about fire response/suppression.

Register via: www.usgbc-sd.org

+ OVERVIEW

How can we take advantage of best practices to rebuild after Southern California's recent wildfires in a sustainable manner?

What conflicting requirements and barriers exist to overcome between fire resistance, codes and green buildings/sustainability?

What new programs, initiatives and organizations are available to address rebuilding in a manner that allows owners and their design/construct teams to "rebuild it right the first time?"

Come join government officials, scientists, professionals as well as various stakeholders, planners, and other experts as we explore and resolve how to effectively address these challenges. An initial work plan will be produced, and a Rebuilding White Paper will accompany this Summit.
